CHILDREN’S RIGHTS IN SPORT
THE PROVISIONS ON CHILDREN’S SPORT

Adopted by the General Assembly of NIF in 2007.
Revised by the General Assembly of NIF in 2015.
In Norway, 8 out of 10 children between the ages of 6 and 12 years, participate in one or more sporting activities.

Participation in sporting activities creates intrinsic values within people and when this is achieved within children, the foundation for life long sports enjoyment is created.

What?

‘Children’s rights in sport’ and ‘the provisions on children’s sport’ are adopted by the General Assembly of NIF and clarifies the recommendations on how to develop positive activities for every child, as an individual. Children’s sports is defined as sporting activities for children up to 12 years of age.

Why do we have provisions and rights?

Children should receive a positive experience every time they participate in sport. Children should have a social environment around sports, feel safe, want to try new things and not be afraid to make mistakes.

All sporting activities should be available to any child wishing to participate, and as far as possible occur within the child’s immediate location. This saves both time and resources and helps develop the local community.

Hvordan?

Children’s activities, conducted in a fun and safe environment, puts the needs of the child in focus. Everyone knowing each other, using each other’s names and supporting each other, creates a good learning atmosphere. The shared experience of being active together and facing challenges by trying and mastering new things creates a unique cohesion and fellowship in the group.

DEVELOPMENT PLAN

The development plan for children’s sport aims to give children the greatest possible variation in activities, and the opportunity to develop basic movement skills. Educational plans within individual federations and the practical implementation from coaches should follow this development plan:

6 YEARS
Play and varied activities to stimulate the child’s development and strengthen their basic movement skills.

7-9 YEARS
This age group has good opportunities to explore and practice various physical activities or sporting exercises with different movement patterns, so that they get a broad experience of motion. This creates a good foundation to develop range of skills at a later stage. Activities can be within one or more sporting disciplines, but each sport has the responsibility to offer a varied program that is applicable to the child’s level of development.

10-12 YEARS
Within this age group, sports shall be planned to offer a variety of activities with a high intensity to ensure good basic skills. Specialisation in one or more sports should ensure a strong technical fundament which can be developed later, within the child’s chosen sport.
